clover grew splendidly. I think it would have made a ton of hay per acre. This clover we ploughed under.
The next spring (1870) the whole field was cultivated but not ploughed, and sown with barley. I could see no difference in the growth of barley on the part ploughed immediately after hay harvest, and that when the clover was allowed to grow and then ploughed under. After the barley the field was ploughed and sown winter wheat. So far, I can see no difference in the color or growth of the wheat.

There was no more labor expended on the one part of the field than on the other. The only difference was that one was ploughed before the clover commerced to grow, and the other after the clover had attained its growth. The presumption is, that not withstanding the fact that a large growth of clover was ploughed under, there was no more nitrogen or other plant-lood in the soil on one part of the field than on the other The plant-food organized in the clover was simply taken out of the soil. and was merely returned when plowed under. Had the part of the field ploughed immediatly after harvest been harrowed, and then ploughed again in the fall, and otherwise cxposed to the decomposing influences of the atmosphere, I believe more plant-food would have been developed from the soil than on the part where the clover was allowed growth. This probably would not be the case in poor, sandy land; but I have no doubt that clay loams, which abounded in latent plant food, would become richer from being worked and exposed to the atmosphere than from the mere growth of clover. If there is any evidence to the contrary, I would like to have it produced. I believe in clover. No one has written more in its favor as a renovating crop. We cannot grow too much of it. But it should all be con-

His theory is that food will be used as a remedy for many diseases successfully. As an example, he cures cases of spitting blood by the use of salt; epilepsy and yellow fever by watermelons; kidney affections by celery; poison, olive or sweet oil; erysipelas, pounded cranberries applied to the parts affected; hydrophobia, onions, &c. So the John P. Dale. way to keep in good health is really to know what to eat, not what medicine to take.

BEES AND BEESWAX .- In a meeting of the agriculturists of Ste. Genevieve, one of the gentlemen proposed the manufacture of artificial honey combs from beeswax by an apparatus invented by a skilful mechanic. The benefit for the agriculturist would be for each pound of wax spent in presenting combs to the beehives, thirty pounds of honey produced in the shortest possible time. There cannot be he thinks, any extraordinary difficutty for dicoveringthe machinery to make artificial honey combs, so like the combs of the bees that they would be readily accepted by them as receptacles for their boney.

Since the PAIN-KILLER was first intre-duced, and met with such unsupassed sale, many Liniment, Panacea, and other remedies have been offered to the public, but not one of them has ever attained the truly ENVIABLE STARDING of the PAIN-KILLER.

By Commodore M. F. Maury, of the Virginia Military Institute. A series of books which mark an era in the study of this science, and which, in the words of a well known and accomplished Southern teacher, "are characterized by a felicity of arrangement and simple freshuess of style which must ever render them attractive to the young, and which will be used by all who wish to teach geography as a science, as something to make pupils think, and not merely as an enumeration of dry facts." Holmes' Readers and Spellers,

By George F. Holmes, LL.D., Professor of History and General Literature in the University of Virginia. A series of Readers unequalled in cheapness, excellence, and typographical beauty. They are steadily progressive in character, bright and fresh in their selections of prose and verse, and illustrative of Southern scenes, incidents, and history. Venable's Arithmetical Series.

By Charles S. Venable, LL.D., Professor of Mathematics in the University of Virginia. These books are received everywhere by intelligent teachers with the highest satisfaction, as being most admirably adapted for mental drill, as well as for business education. Their methods, rules, and reasonings are clear, distinct, logical, and comprehensive, and the series is carefully graded throughout. Holmes' History of the United States,

By George F. Holmes, LL.D., of the University of Virginia. It is enough to say of this admirable work, interesting, impartial, and truthful, as well as pure and graceful in style, that it is the only History of the United States which is strictly unpartisan. Another of the chief advantages of this line over the rope line is, that clothes of any kind will not freeze to it in cold weather, and the A FULL ASSORTMENT OF line over the rope line is, that clothes or any alm will not freeze to it in cold weather, and the finest fabrics can be removed at any time with out injury. A rope line will always absorb more or less moisture from the clothes, and in cold weather will freeze through and through, and thin articles cannot be removed without a liability of tearing them. While the wire being of a pure metallic substance does not absorb the slightest moisture, consequently there cannot be frost enough formed to cause an adhesion, and even the finest gauze can be removed from the hne without injuring it in the least.

7th. The alkalies now being used in the patent soaps have not the least effect on the White Wire Lines. They dry quick and escape.

8th. It will save you its price in saving you time and trouble every six menths you own it.

9th. It never will break and drop clothes into the mud. The old rope line is frequently the cause of a whole day extra washing. This one thing alone is enough to condemn the old style of lines farever, and call into requisition an article that is free from all such provoking annoyances, something strong, clean and durable that is free from all such provoking annoyances, something strong, clean and durable Pumps. ly attended to.
